

KINKALLY

Bluecrow worked closely with Award Winning Architects Da Bureau and the client Kinkally to develop their design concept and bring it to reality.

Starting from an empty shell, Bluecrow began the task of forming all new perimeter walls and bulkhead ceilings to accept the highly detailed three-layer process of venetian polished plaster finish. All corners of any new wall or reveal were curved internally and externally along with a shadow gap detail top and bottom giving a soft, gentle flowing feel to the space.

The same venetian polished plaster was also used for the floor surface, this made the project programme key to allow a continuous flow to the project. Down in the basement a separate room houses a bespoke bar - Bar Kinky - with Stainless steel floor to ceiling clad walls and main island bar. For more project information, please visit our website.
